The containers used in these examples are simply examples. There is no need to get the identical boxes, or include all the same equipment. The examples show a typical set-up. Just remember when selecting your containers – don't make them so big that they become too heavy to effectively move around, and not so small that you make a dozen trips just to get your mobile kitchen into the home. Translucent is preferred so that you can see what is in the box without opening, and each container must have a lid – fold out lids are the general choice by personal chefs.
